Library

hanken.fi/library

The Hanken library is open to everyone carrying out studies or research in the field of economics and business administration. It is a hybrid of printed collections, electronic information resources and a wireless study area. All of our services are available or described on the website.

FIND RESOURCES

Our information resources can be searched in the discovery service Hanna or our Libguides. You can search for books, journal articles, theses and more. Books not available at Hanken can be located at other libraries through Melinda.

You can easily find and access databases and other electronic resources by using Hanna or Libguides. Students and staff at Hanken can access licensed e-resources outside Hanken's local network by logging in using their Hanken user-ID.

You can access our e-journals also through BrowZine, the library's app for e-journals. Use PressReader, ePress and FT.com for reading digital newspapers.

Printed copies are organized in separate sections. Check for the name of the collection and the call number in Hanna. Course books are found next to the library's Help Zone. In the Book Cave you find the book collection and series.

The Library publishes Hanken's publications. They are available in full text in the repository DHanken, along with all open access and self-archieved material of the school.

STUDY ENVIRONMENT

The study environment in the library consists mainly of quiet reading spaces. The Book Cave and the Skills lab in the Help Zone are available for group work. The computers in the computer class are reserved for students at Hanken.

Walk-in users can use the kiosks in the Help Zone. The Hanken wireless network is available in the library.

The Library provides training in information retrieval within the programme for academic competencies and work skills at Hanken. The training is either integrated into regular courses, or arranged as separate training sessions focused on specific tools and databases.
